Dear Future Employer:

I would like to offer a formal recommendation for Annika Rockwell, one of our top 5% students in the Dietetic and Nutrition program at Keiser University. Annika was one of my students during two courses: Medical Nutrition Therapy and Clinical Nutrition and Disease. In addition, as the Program Director, I communicated with her regularly to orchestrate her 32 weeks of supervised practice.

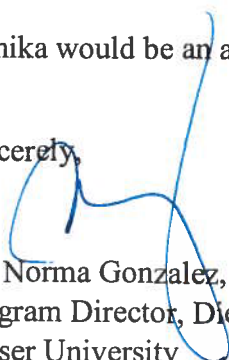

During the time I've known Annika, I've observed her to be a committed and exemplary student, achieving a 4.0 GPA and earning Dean's List honors. She has been an active participant in each of her classes, showing genuine enthusiasm for the field of dietetics and nutrition. Annika has consistently shown to be reliable, trustworthy, committed, smart, team player and responsible.

Annika prepared exceptional interactive class presentations during the student-led teaching opportunities, demonstrating her ability to research her topics with depth, present in an engaging way, and find ways to help the students learn using games and activities. She is very well-organized and detail-oriented as can be seen by the quality of her academic work.

Annika is respected by her peers who have asked her to serve with the important role of official note-taker for class lectures throughout the program, and she is also known as the student who helps solve technical support issues in the classroom. She communicates well with her classmates and professors and has a happy and helpful demeanor. She always has a very good attitude and disposition to work with her peers.

Annika would be an asset to any organization and I highly recommend her.

Sincerely,

Dr. Norma Gonzalez, DCN, RD, CDE, LD/N
